Foreword

Hip, Hip, Hurrah!

Mark D. Miller, MD
Consulting Editor

In the sports medicine world, you are either a “hipster” or you are not. If you are not, you need to have one (or more) of them on your team, and you need to know enough about the hip to know who to refer. This issue of Clinics in Sports Medicine is primarily focused on us “nonhipsters,” and it is hoped, will make us just a little bit smarter in the eyes of the true “hipsters.” It is also an update and treatise on athletic hip injuries for those of us who take care of these problems, and all aspiring “hipsters” out there.

This issue includes articles on evaluation and workup, treatment of many hip conditions, with a focus well beyond arthroscopy, and addresses many special situations, such as the adolescent hip, gender differences, and rehabilitation. I am proud of my partner at University of Virginia, Dr Winston Gwathmey, and former University of Virginia fellow, Dr Dustin Richter, for putting together such an outstanding issue—Go ‘Hoos!
